Subject: FCC Docket 92-235

To Whom It May Concern:

The adoption of the referenced docket just recently came to my attention. It appears that adopting this docket now has serious public safety implications.

The areas of concern include:

- * The availability of equipment capable of meeting the proposed standards.
- * Total replacement of our radio systems, including base, portable and mobile radios at a cost in excess of $25,000. (This does not include our share of the replacement of commonly held transmitter sites.)

While all of the implications of adoption are not fully understood, it is clear to me that it will have a substantial impact on our communication systems without providing reasonable lead time for planning and budgeting.

With this in mind, we respectfully request that implementation of the docket be delayed at least until the year 2004.

Consideration of this request is appreciated.

Sincerely,

Jack Lynch
